James Earle Hagood was the son of Col. Benjamin Hagood (1788-1865) and Adaline Ambler Hagood (1808-1877), born 30 November 1826 in Pickens District. He was engaged in the mercantile business until 1856 when he was elected clerk of the circuit court of Pickens District. After the Civil War, Hagood read law, was admitted to the bar, and from 1868 until 1873 practiced law in partnership with Joseph J. Norton of Pickens. He was one of six commissioners appointed in 1868 to select a site for the present town of Pickens, and between 1869 and 1872 he represented Pickens County in the South Carolina General Assembly. James E. Hagood was married in 1847 to Esther ("Essie") Benson Robinson (1829-1889), and they were the parents of ten children. Hagood served as clerk of the circuit court throughout the period of the Civil War and frequently was called upon to perform services for soldiers who were away in the army and for civilians who were destitute as a result of the war. The Hagood papers are in the University of South Carolina and encompass the war years.
