BRASS RULE LINES ON CSA 7-L

Brass rules are an interesting variety of the 5 cent typography Confederate stamp No. 7-L. the brass rule lines may appear as thin parallel lines printed in the sheets margins.

*Sheets of the later printings sometimes show fine parallel lines of color on the margins above the top and below the bottom rows as well as the right and left of the side rows. This is explained by the fact that the printer in order to relieve the pressure (and ware) on the outer rows of the stamps by surrounding the plates with strips of brass rule – a method well known to craftsmen. * August dietz 1929.*

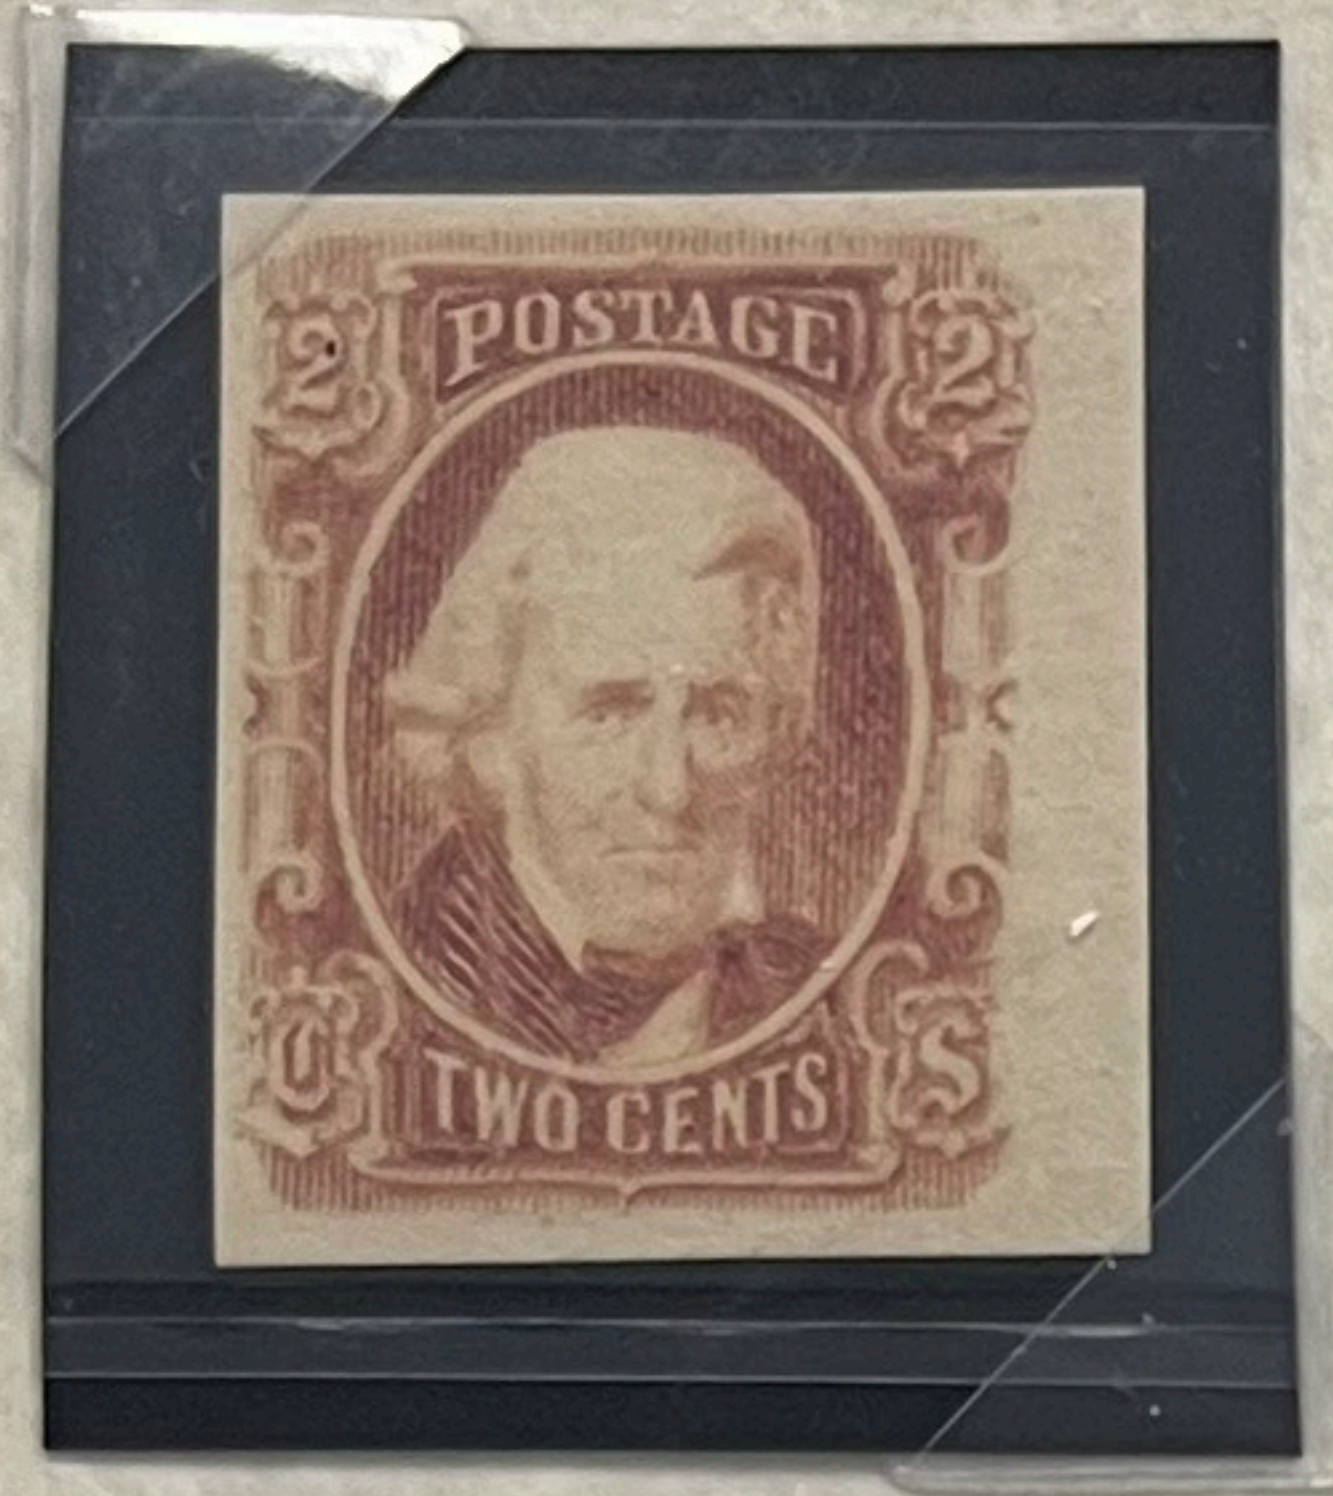

The brass rule lines are found to be consistently 1 mm and or 6 mm from the stamp's design frame respectively and were printed in Richmond, Virginia on London paper with London ink.

The below brass rules lines were printed on the outside vertical and horizontal edges of this block of six. This block is from the upper left pane, positions 1-2-3 & 11-12-13.

2nd Lt. W. S. Owen, 115th Regiment, Virginia Militia.

This blue dateless Richmond postmark was only used on soldiers mail. The postmark was used during a limited period of mid May through early June in 1863 as a large volume of soldiers letters were passing through Richmond at that time.

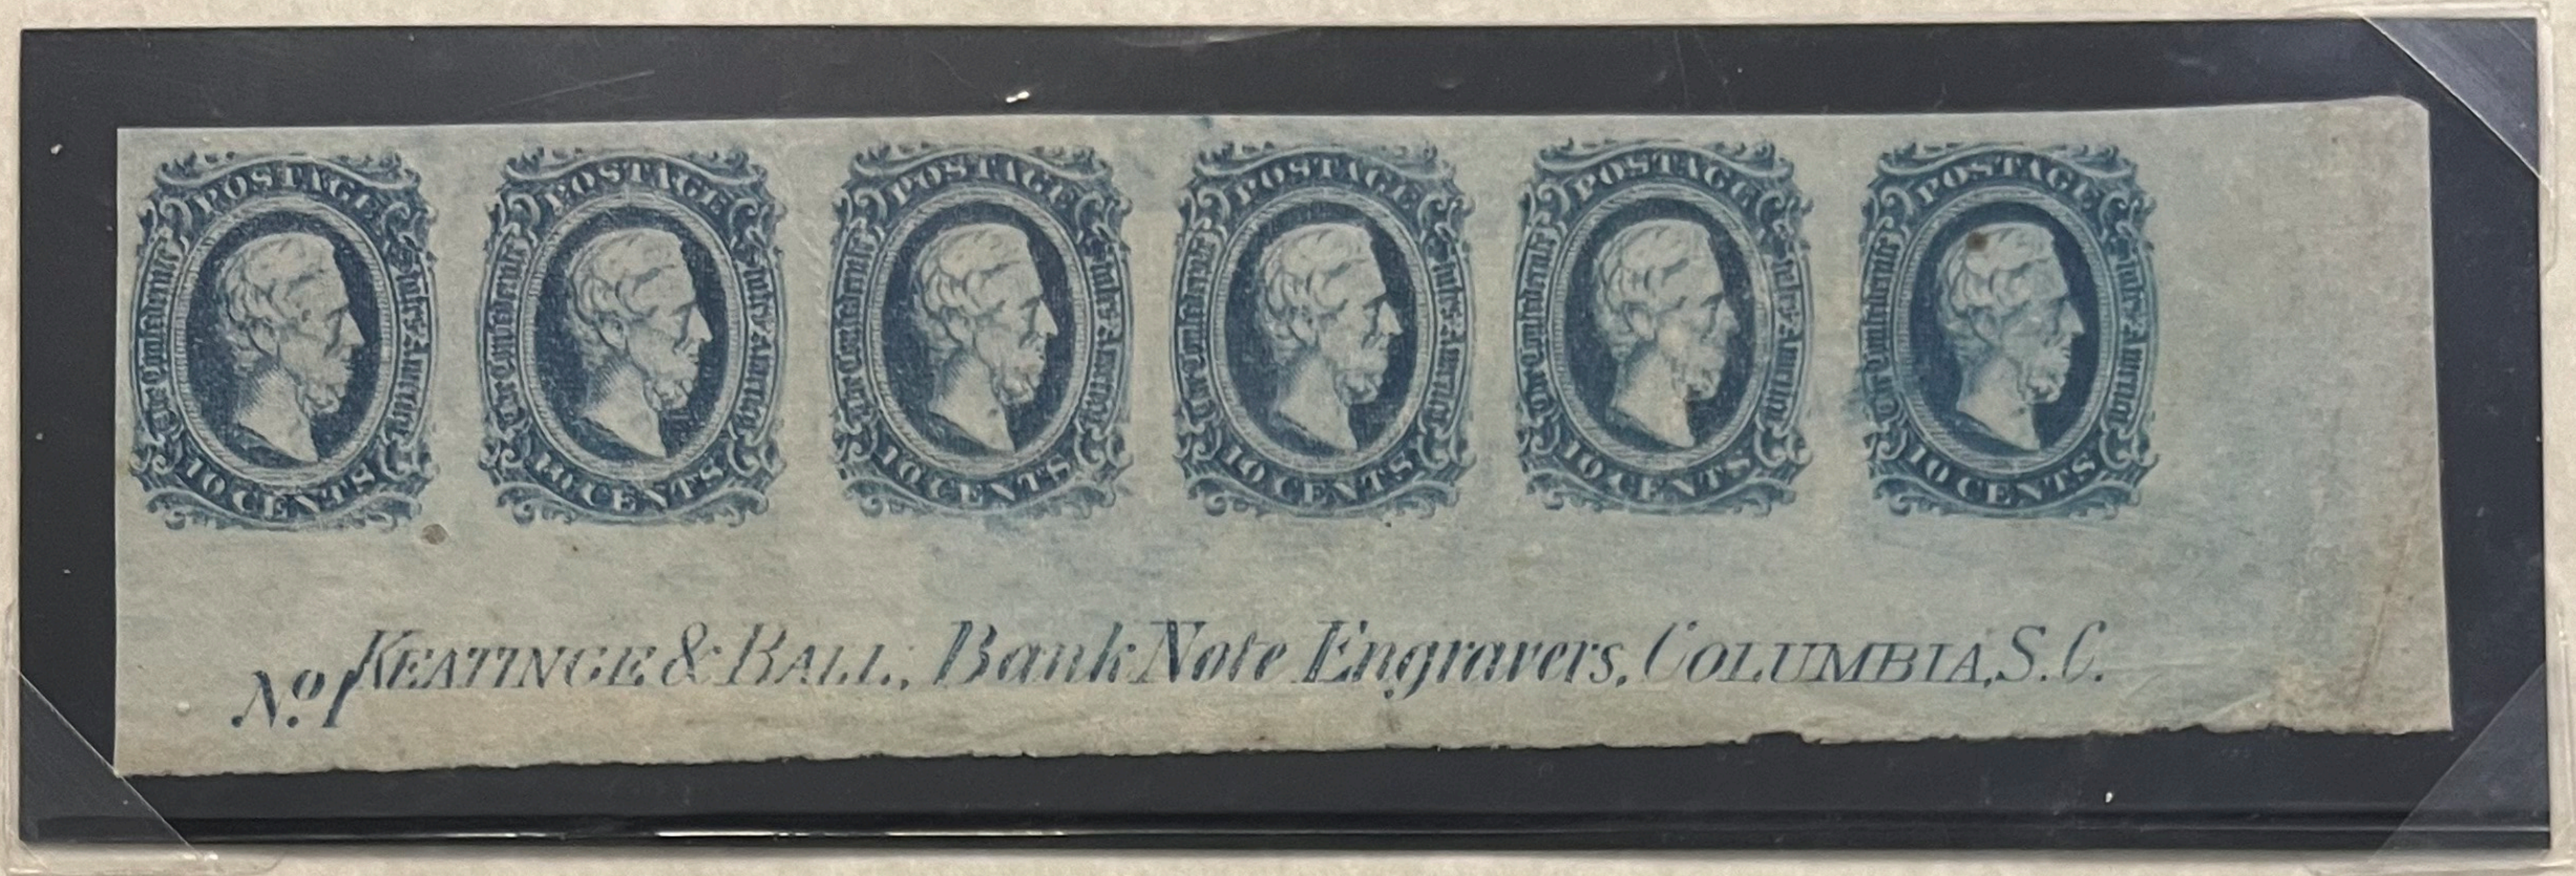

The Daily Richmond Examiner 21 April 1863 – THE NEW POSTAGE CURRENCY – A new issue of ten cent stamps has been made, and is quite popular currency.. Being as much sought for as change in the absence of small notes as for posting mail. The stamp is of lighter print and much neater than the old stamp and bears the bust of the President of the Confederate States in profile, en wreathed with the words. "Postage Ten Cents, Confederate States of America". The issue of these stamps has already been large, and threatens to supplant the five cent stamp since the postage of letters has been increased to ten cents.

On piece with blue CDS
April 6 – Lynchburg, Va.
Docketing: recd. April 9th 1864.

Very early – Left: Dark Green Faint line around the vignette would disappear during future printings. Random small black dots on the surface are from imperfections in the steel.

Right stamp yellow green.

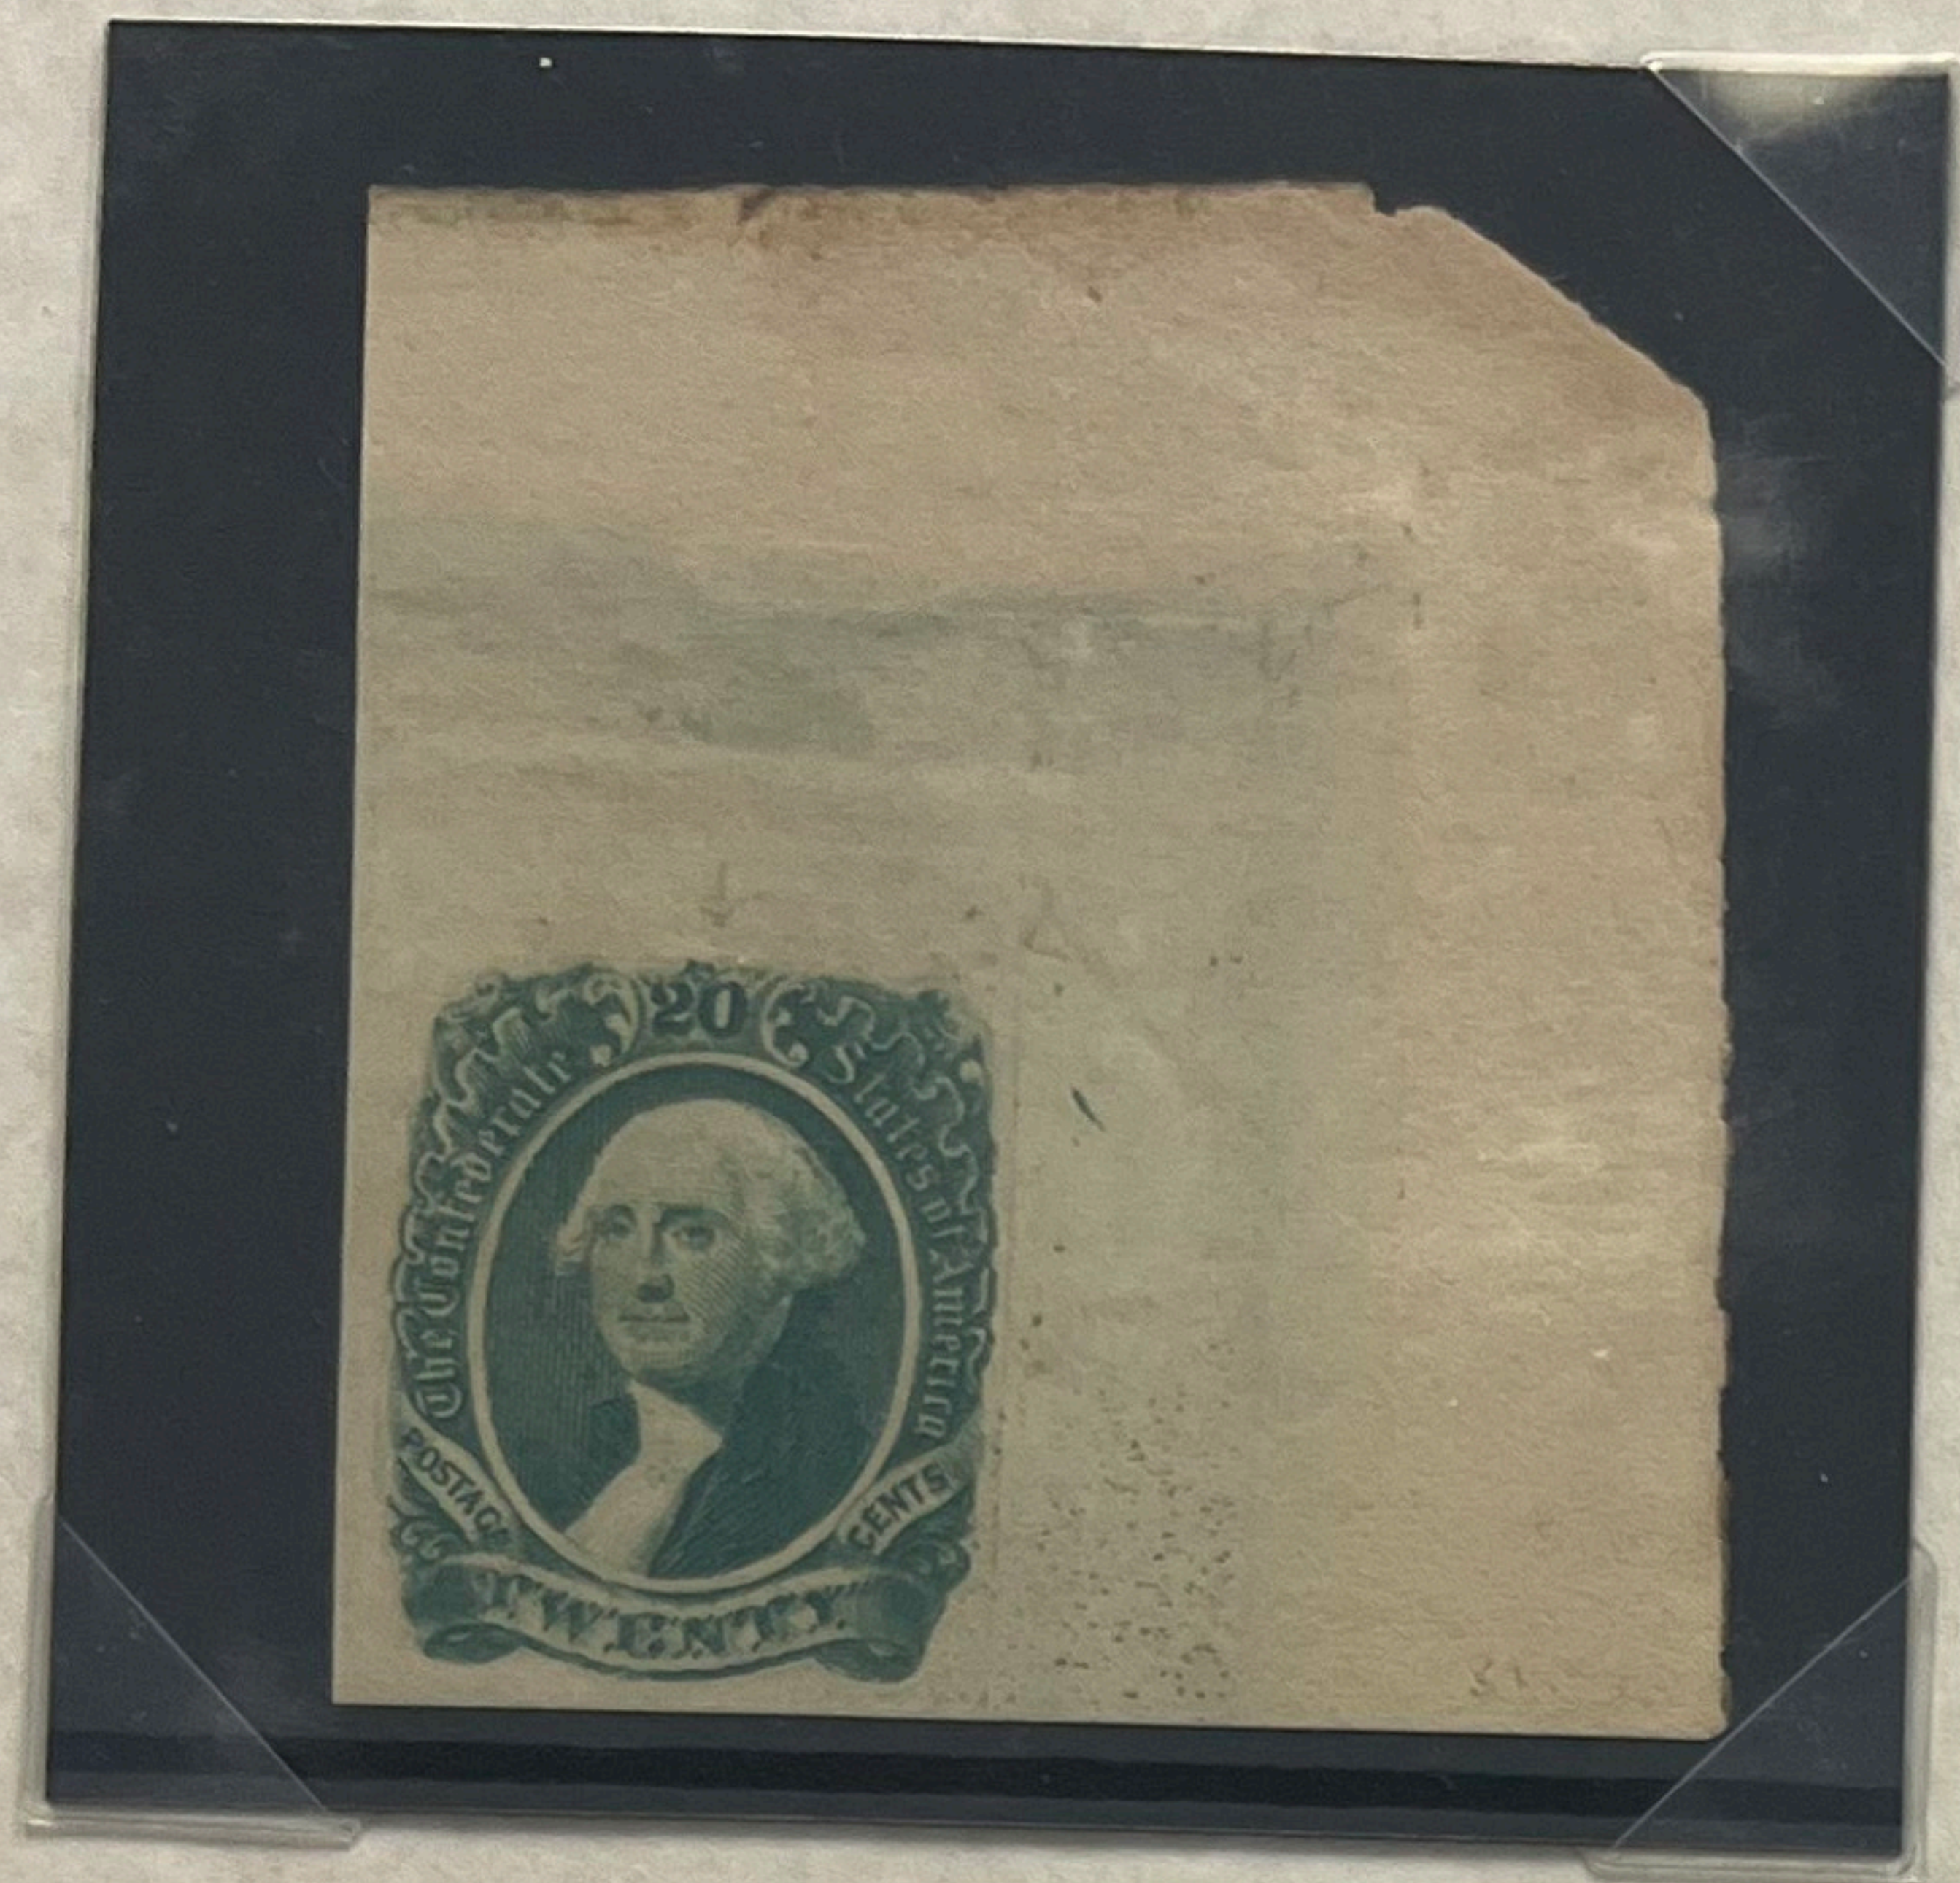

This was the only 20 cent stamp printed by the Confederacy. The 20c green would pay a double weight rate and double 20c stamps would pay the trans Mississippi rate. This stamps specific purpose was not for postal use but to be used for small change as the Confederacy had no coins. In 1863 & 1864 a 50c note was issued to assist with this problem. Because there was not much of a call for the postal usage of a 20c stamp, very few of them were actually used as postage.
